LOGLINE

A young history student sets out on a journey from Pamplona, the city where she lives and studies, that will take her from the western end of the Roman Empire to its capital, Rome.

SYNOPSIS

Ane Urrizburu is a young student of History and Archaeology who, driven by curiosity and passion, embarks on a journey to learn about the ins and outs of Epigraphy and the meaning of inscriptions in Roman society and nowadays.

On her way through Portugal, Spain, France and Italy she gets to know the most famous epigraphic collections from experts in the field, thus discovering the most academic part.

She even goes a step further, entering the bowels of a museum, the excavation of a site, the workshop of a stonemason and the mind of a creator of historical dissemination video games, to delve into the most mysterious, didactic and human part.

It is, in short, the experience of Antiquity by the handwriting of its protagonists and of those who, today, continue to tell these fascinating stories encrypted in stone.
